Pell Grant recipients required to be drug-free

Students must sign certification to receive funds

By Neil Farrell
Staff Writer

Cal Poly students set to receive Pell Grants for the 1989-90 school year are being required to sign a certificate stating they will not be involved with any controlled substances for the duration of the grant, ac-ording to an official in the Financial Aid Office.

The 1989-90 Drug Certification Statement, which all students receiving Pell Grants are required to sign, states "I certify that, as a condition of my Pell Grant, I will not engage in the unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession or use of a controlled substance during the period covered by my Pell Grant."

Assistant Director of Financial Aid Robin Loftus said the office will be responsible for reporting students convicted of drug-related offenses to the Department of Education. Students in violation could face federal charges.

"If a student does participate in drug use..." Loftus said, "If the student is convicted of a drug offense, and convicted is the key word, during the period of the grant, the miscertification must be reported in accordance of the law. It would be considered fraud."

According to California Health and Safety Code 11357 B, the possession of less than one ounce of marijuana is a misdemeanor in California punishable by a $150 fine but requiring no jail sentence.

If, however, a student who signs the certificate and accepts a Pell Grant is convicted for possessing the same amount of marijuana, he could conceivably serve a year in jail or more than a year in federal prison depending on whether the case is treated as a federal misdemeanor or felony case.

No information has been provided to students regarding the definition of controlled substances, the penalties for violation of the certification or what legal process violators will be subject to.

The Mustang Daily made calls to the Department of Education Region 9 offices in San Francisco and was referred to Department offices in Washington. The official handling all inquiries from the media could not be reached for comment.

The new requirement is due to passage of the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 by Congress. The Act was passed in August of last year with an in-

City: Apartment dwellers also must save water or face fines

By Doug DiFranco
Staff Writer

There may be a general attitude among San Luis Obispo apartment dwellers that the water shortage and conservation methods do not apply to them. However, said one city official, apartments and other multi-family units are being asked to conform to the new regulations.

Tina Metzger, San Luis Obispo water conservation coordinator, said the water reduction rates do apply to apartment dwellers, and flagrant misuse of water will result in fines and restriction of water services.

Since it is difficult to detect who is wasting water in large multi-family units such as apartment houses, which are typically on one general meter, Metzger said the penalties will be assessed to the owners.

Owners can then decide how to pass along the penalties to dwellers. This can be done either by raising rents, charging the individual tenants the surcharge or restricting individual water use, she added.

For apartments, Metzger described the following water reduction rates:

- During summer (April-October), apartment dwellers must reduce water usage by 15 percent over the 1987 base year consumption rate.
- During winter (November-March), a 10 percent reduction must be shown. For single family units, the summer and winter rates are 30 percent and 10 percent, respectively.

Metzger said summer figures are higher because that is typically when landscaping and higher water use occurs.

She added that conservation laws will be enforced by the San Luis Obispo Drought Patrol, which will investigate calls of water abuse in the city. A log will be kept, and penalties will follow.

A warning will be issued the first time someone is caught flagrantly wasting water, said Metzger. The second time, the person could be fined from $100 to $500, depending on the severity of the situation. Should water waste persist, a flow restrictor could be placed on the customer's water line, Metzger said.

Student apartment dwellings are no exception to the water-restriction rules, Metzger said.

Higher water use occurs when students constantly wash their cars or leave water running unattended, she said. So far, Metzger has found no purposeful misuse of water by students.

"Students are conscientious (about conserving water)," Metzger said. "But sometimes they are not aware of the water problems facing the community, especially if they are from another town," she added.

Biochemistry freshman Julie Kendall agreed. Kendall lives in Valencia Apartments and said she notices "a lot of water waste" every day. Kendall said she sees the same people washing their cars every week, leaving the water on, allowing it to run down the gutters, contributing to excessive water waste.

"Some people here don't feel the water shortage affects them because they don't pay for water specifically," she said. "They turn on the faucet and water comes out, so they think there's no shortage," she added.

Kendall said the fine and warning system set up to discourage excessive water use "is the only reasonable solution to make people aware."

Rocks, bottles thrown

25 police units called to stop rowdy party

By John Kesecker
Staff Writer

At least 25 police units from all over the county, some with police dogs, arrived at the Cedar Creek apartment complex to break up what could be described as a "party royal" on Saturday at about midnight.

According to police officer Gary Orback, somebody in the Stenner Street complex pulled a fire alarm. When fire department personnel came, party-goers began throwing rocks and bottles at them. The police soon followed.

When it appeared the crowd was getting out of hand, back-ups were called in from all over the county. Police cars arrived by the dozens, carrying officers clad in riot gear. Several people were arrested.

"People were on the roofs shouting and throwing bottles and rocks," said Orback. He said that most of the trouble seemed to be caused by people who did not live in the complex, but who just showed up for parties. He explained that most of the tenants were very cooperative.

Many people involved in the incident said they felt the police acted wrongly in the situation.

"We weren't even doing anything, they just yelled at us to get back. They chased us and we could hear the cracking as people got hit with clubs. We just ran inside our apartment and locked the door," said Scott Opalka, a Poly student and resident of Cedar Creek. "They provoked it."

Joe Donoghue, another resident of Cedar Creek said that the police chased him and his friends with dogs and clubs.

"They sprayed me with mace. We got our asses kicked for no reason," said Donoghue.

The tension subsided around 1 a.m. as the crowd of students and police began to disperse.

CFA, CSU make deal on faculty pay raise
4.7 percent increase starts June 1By Laura Daniels
Staff Writer

A compromise has relieved the faculty pay-raise dispute between the California Faculty Association and the CSU Chancellor's Office — the two have reached a tentative agreement for a 4.7 percent pay raise to start June 1.

"Wonders never cease," exclaimed professor Adelaide Harmon-Elliott, Cal Poly Chapter's president of CFA.

For months, neither side disputed the 4.7 percent increase in faculty salaries, a total of $3.3 million of the $9.9 million allotted in the state budget. It is the remaining $6.6 million splitting the CSU and CFA, each claiming ownership of the money.

"It's the faculty's money and the faculty's rights," Harmon-Elliott said, adding the CSU does not need the money. "They want to be in control, (but) they'll have to learn how to negotiate."

Frank Gerry, CSU officer in the employee relations office, said the CFA does not see the whole picture.

Gerry said when the state legislature passed the budget for 1988-89, it included an "unallocated budget reduction," which translates to a three percent cut in the CSU budget. The CSU claims the extra $6.6 million serves as a cushion for the mandatory budget cut.

In requiring the CSU to cut its budget, state legislators did not specify what areas to cut.

"What they basically said is 'We're not going to tell you where the money's going to come from,' but it has to come from somewhere," Gerry said.

Gerry also said the state Department of Finance wrote a

City disregards student impact

by Glenn Reeu

Recently, the San Luis Obispo City Council requested that Cal Poly share some of its water with the city. On the surface, the city's request seems a reasonable response to its water crisis because students constitute a large faction of city water users; they should help the city through its shortage. Underlying its request, however, is an attitude that seems to pervade the local government. There are two kinds of people in San Luis Obispo: wholesome, taxpaying, voting San Luis Obispoans and the somewhat less-desirable students.

The city seems to view students as essentially a transient band of hoodlums poised to rape their fair town. It is students, in fact, who furnish San Luis Obispo with the cornerstone of its economic prosperity and stability and provide the prestige of being associated with a major university. It is also important that students who pay rent in San Luis Obispo also pay taxes and have absolutely no weaker or fewer rights than any other citizen. While students as individuals may only spend three to six years here, the presence of students in San Luis Obispo must be thought of as a very permanent situation. The interests of students must also be thought of in this light.

The circumstance that this should be written soon after Poly Royal is considerably more than coincidental — both because of the irony of the Poly Royal theme and because of the paradox that Poly Royal weekend embodies for the city.

More than any other time, Poly Royal is when the city's us vs. them mentality flares. This is the time of year when the city concentrates its army of helmeted warriors of law and order at the Poly border and whines loudly about the intrusion of the hordes, but all the while enjoys packed motels and restaurants and the swarm of downtown shoppers.

Poly Royal represents, to the San Luis Obispo police, an opportunity to crack down on students who may be having too good a time. But I'd like to ask: Are these club-toting men in black our protectors or our oppressors? I believe they are the latter. They crashed last year's Poly Royal parties, bearing clubs and helmets. They came without in-itation to SAE's Red Party, and they rioted to prevent the Dead Kennedys from being heard.

Late last year, when faced with similar oppression, the students at UCSB rioted in a situation we probably would have simply allowed to pass. I don't believe we are inherently different from those UCSB students, but I believe we suffer from a faulty self-perception: that we are second class citizens, and the rights of those who live here full time outweigh our own. Even things like Good Neighbor Day are a subtle admission by some students that they do not consider themselves to be part of the greater community. It is this self-perception that we must change.

The council would have all students live on campus because our demand for housing raises rents. The council would have all fraternities and sororities live miles from campus disregarding that the airport is beyond convenient walking distance to school. The council would have Cal Poly surrender some of its water because the city perceives students as illegitimate customers of the water department despite paying the same rates as everyone else.

The theme of the past weekend was "Unity Through Diversity," but perhaps a more accurate assessment of our dilemma would be "Weakness Through Division." The reorganization of ASI and its offices into a corporate, rather than governmental, structure points out what has long been students' disadvantage when dealing with the city. We have no organized body capable of voicing legitimate student concerns as citizens of San Luis Obispo despite the city's continual organized attack on our rights.

Although permanent residents of San Luis Obispo may have deeper roots here than most students, the perennial stream of students through the city will far outlive them. For these future students, and also for ourselves, we must strengthen the student position in order to protect our rights against the process of erosion the city propagates.

Speaker choice galls June grads

Editor — One of the highlights of a commencement ceremony is the guest speaker. Unfortunately, there will not be a speaker from outside the university at the June commencement ceremony ("December to feature two commencements," April 25). I feel cheated that the commencement will not feature someone from outside the university setting. Some of us have listened for five years to people from this university. We were looking forward to someone new!

The selection committee, I believe, has erred. To not have a second speaker in mind in case the first choice does not accept the offer is unacceptable. If the reply was received too late to find a replacement, then there should have been a deadline on acceptance of the invitation. Putting all your eggs in one basket may have worked before, but obviously it did not work this time. I have waited five years for this day, and unfortunately because of poor planning, it will not be as spectacular as I had hoped.

I guess you are right, Mr. Bostrom, a year from now will be a lot better!

Chris McNairy
Agricultural Engineering

Editor — After reading the article "December to feature two commencements," (April 25), I was extremely disappointed by both the decision not to seek a commencement speaker from outside the university and by the attitude of Robert Bostrom. I feel as if my graduation ceremony has been "written off" like a poor business investment.

I can attribute failing to have an alternative speaker lined up to poor planning, but I can only interpret the committee's decision not to search for a replacement speaker as apathy. I cannot believe that every person worthy of consideration as a commencement speaker requires more than three months of notice to speak. Instead, it seems to me that Mr. Bostrom is resigned to failure and would rather look ahead to next year's commencement ceremony, promising that it will be "a lot better." Mr. Bostrom may be able to look forward to next year, but as a graduating senior, I must be satisfied with this year's effort. For Mr. Bostrom, this may be only a semiannual duty, but for me, it is a once-in-a-lifetime event.

Lawsuits raise medical costs

Editor — I fully agree with one of R. Miller's points in regard to the intrinsic value of human life ("Socialized medicine: don't miss the point," April 25). However, the answer to millions of people being without a comprehensive health care system is not socialized health care. The answer is to reduce the legal burden of the medical industry.

It is common knowledge all professionals, especially medical professionals, are at high risk in terms of litigation. Doctors must incorporate the risk and financial burden of constant, pointless litigation; and they in turn pass the cost to the patient. The fault for such costly medical attention does not rest on the shoulders of the medical profession, but rather our "consumer-conscious" legislatures and courts. These two bodies have made legal action so profitable and easy that people sue doctors, or any professionals, because they cannot deliver a "perfect" product. No one ever guarantees complete satisfaction or risk-free treatment. The bottom line: make business easier for doctors, and they will pass the savings to the consumer.

School of Business offers minor

Ron Espejo
Staff Writer

Cal Poly now offers a business minor, a move students have welcomed and called long overdue.

In a survey conducted several years ago by a former Cal Poly business professor, 40 percent of the students interviewed wanted a minor. The minor actually started last quarter, said Bev Hensel, adviser to the School of Business. "After many years we can now say we finally have one," Hensel said.

Admission to the minor in business administration is on a competitive basis due to the great interest shown by the students. "This program is designed for someone not going into the business field and should give the student an introduction to the common body of business," said Kenneth Riener, the associate dean of the School of Business.

The following courses should be completed with a specific grade to receive top priority to managers," said junior Brian Suffredini, an aeronautical engineering major. "It's essential for an engineer who aspires to be in a business position to know the basic aspects of it."

"I may consider it for next fall," said sophomore Steve Simons, a biological science major. "Business and science are totally different, but it will round out my education."

The School of Business has a faculty policy limiting the number of minors to 25 percent of graduating seniors, or about 75 to 100 per year. Enrollment in the School of Business last fall was about 1800 according to Associate Dean Riener.

Students must maintain a 2.0 GPA in the minor courses once admitted or be subject to dismissal from the minor. Applications for the minor will be accepted during the fourth week of each quarter. For further information and to pick up an application, students should contact Bev Hensel in Room 116 of the Business Administration and Education Building.

apply for the minor: Math 221 or equivalent, Statistics 251 and 252, Business 207, Accounting 211 or 221, and Economics 221 and 222. Students will be ranked based on grades from those courses and their overall grade point average.

Students from other majors said they think it's a good idea that has been long overdue. Engineering majors are specifically targeted because they need management skills.

Poly bridges, canoes cross winning line

By Laura Fleischer

A civil engineering senior's bridge, made of Popsicle sticks and white glue, held up to almost 3,300 pounds of pressure Saturday to become the winning entry in the Society of Civil Engineers' Poly Royal competition.

Leo Gallagher, who designed the first-place bridge that spanned about two feet, received a free dinner for two at Hudson's Grill to reward his efforts.

But Cal Poly's Society of Civil Engineers (SCE) and member Gallagher have been winning a lot of awards lately.

Gallagher also designed two bridges which were entered in the Society of Civil Engineers' regional competition April 21-22 in Tempe, Ariz. Cal Poly placed first overall out of 16 schools from California, Arizona and Hawaii, with 50 members of its chapter in attendance.

The bridge-strength competition is determined by applying a hydraulic press to the structure until it breaks. That weight is then compared to the weight of the bridge to calculate the pressure withstood. Gallagher's bridges, which he designed with the aid of a computer, came in first and second in Tempe.

About $4,000 was donated by the School of Engineering and the civil engineering department, said conference chairman Danae Eubanks, civil engineering senior.

The competition gives participants a chance to "show off" their engineering skills and compete against other schools, she said.

Loggin' in Moscow

By Mike McMillan
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly Logging Team traveled to Moscow (Idaho, that is) last week for the 50th Annual Association of Western Forestry Championships hosted by the University of Idaho.

Poly finished eighth in a field of 16 schools, including teams from as far away as Canada and Alaska.

The 170 participants made for the largest turnout in conclave history.

"A lot of people don't realize there are still many people making their livings as lumberjacks," said Blaine Boccignone, logging team president.

Poly's logging team is in its tenth year of intercollegiate competition.

Last year's conclave was held in Montana. This year, the Poly lumberjacks drove 25 hours to enjoy a week filled with sightseeing, forestry education, and national competition.

"The highlight of the conclave was when Smokey McLaughlin took first place in the birling (log running)," said Boccignone. "He went up against a birler from Idaho with a reputation for not get

Mustangs hold on to first

By John Kesecker
Staff Writer

Cal Poly took the first two games of a three-game series in exciting fashion against the Cal State Los Angeles Eagles.

In Friday's 8-5 win, the Mustangs had to hold-off an Eagle surge in the late innings to take the ballgame.

"We were down early in the ballgame, came back to take the lead and held them off in the end," said Cal Poly baseball coach Steve McFarland.

Poly scored four runs in the sixth with the help of Ron Crowe and Doug Noce, who hit back-to-back triples. The Mustangs added an insurance run in the eighth to hold off the Eagles.

The win gave winning pitcher Greg Paxton a 6-1 record in league play.

In Saturday's action, the Mustangs improved their record to 26-20 with an 8-4 win over the Eagles.

"Bob Ryan pitched an outstanding ballgame. He gave us the chance to generate the offense we needed to win the game," said McFarland.

Pat Kirby supplied much of the offense by driving home three runs for the Mustangs.

CSLA started the game off quickly with a run in the second inning. The Mustangs scored two runs in both the fourth and sixth innings to take control of the game. The Eagles rallied back with a three-run eighth inning to make the game close at 5-4, but the Mustangs answered with three runs of their own in the bottom half of the eighth to shut the door on the Eagles.

The Mustangs are in first place by one game with five league games yet to play. The final three game series with second place Cal Poly Pomona may decide who gets the playoff berth.

"For us, we will have to play aggressively to win," said McFarland.

Records fall at invitational

By Neil Farrell
Staff Writer

The Poly Royal Invitational track meet saw several personal records set for the Mustang's men's and women's squads.

Women's team coach Lance Harter described the meet as fantastic as his team recorded first place finishes in nine events. The men's team finished first in six events.

The Poly Royal meet was a non-scoring meet intended to give participants a chance to qualify for the national meet. The teams which participated were UC Davis, Sonoma State, UC Santa Barbara and Cal State Bakersfield.

The women's 1500-meter race saw five Cal Poly runners register national qualifying times and personal best times. Sherri Minkler won the race in a time of 4:26.34, and finishing second was Noreen Debettencourt with a time of 4:26.99. The team took six of the top eight spots in the race, with Stephanie Barrett and Melanie Hiatt finishing fourth and fifth and Kristina Hand and Kris Kochel finishing in the seventh and eighth spots. All but Kochel qualified for nationals in the race.

Long jumper Vicki Allegri qualified for the nationals by soaring 19 feet 4 and one-fourth inches. That mark was a personal best for Allegri, improving on her previous mark by 13 inches.

Sharon Polley had an impressive meet, taking a first in the 100-meter high hurdles with a time of 14.64 and a second in the 100-meter dash with time of 12.47. Kim Shepard finished third behind Polley in the 100-meter with a time of 12.60 and second in the 200-meter in 25.37.

Buffy Sexton qualified for the nationals in the javelin with a throw of 150 feet, improving her previous high mark by 12 feet.

There were, however, disappointments for the women's team.

Two women athletes narrowly missed qualifying for the nationals. Although Mellissa White won the discus with a throw of 45.55 meters, she missed qualifying for the national meet by 1 centimeter. White has already qualified for the nationals in the javelin, Harter said.

Aeron Arlin missed qualifying in the 800-meter race by one-hundredth of a second.

On the men's side, highlights of the meet were a personal record in the 1500-meters for Erik Axtell with a time of 3:53.58. Two Cal Poly pole vaulters went over 17 feet 6 inches to qualify for the nationals. Steve Horvath won the event with Kevin Rankin finishing second. It was the second consecutive week that Rankin and Horvath cleared 17 feet. They both jumped 17 feet at the Mt. Sac meet last weekend.

Brent Warren won the javelin with a toss of 65.81 meters, with Cal Poly alumni Tom Silva finishing second at 63.67 meters.

Steve Neubaum ran away with the 5,000-meter race with a time of 14:53.3 and the Cal Poly "A" relay team took the 1600-meter race with a time of 3:15.45.

The Mustangs dominated the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, taking the top five spots. Mike King won the race with a time of 52.97.

The men's and women's teams will next travel to Modesto for the S & W Invitationals, and in two weeks will be back at Cal Poly to compete in the conference championships.

Softball sweeps Chapman

By Michael J. Levy
Staff Writer

A doubleheader sweep over Chapman at home on Saturday enabled the Cal Poly softball team to seal up second place in the CCAA. The wins should advance them to the playoffs.

Only the conference winner is assured of making the NCAA Western Regionals, but the second and third-place teams usually get at-large bids.

The Mustangs pitchers did not allow a run in either game, winning the games 1-0 and 4-0.

Lisa Johnson pitched a complete game in the opener, giving up just four hits and striking out three Chapman batters. Michelle Sorci also pitched a complete game in the nightcap, giving up three hits while striking out one.

Leading the Mustang offense was second baseman Cheryl Lutes. She went 4-for-5 on the day and scored three times.

The doubleheader marked the last home games for Ellen Frank, who is the only senior on the team. Frank, who has been splitting time between shortstop and first base, collected three RBI's on the day, including the game-winning in the opener.

The Lady Mustangs will be in the Sacramento State Tournament this weekend, before going to the regionals on May 13-14. The regionals location not be announced until next week.

Cholesterol study raises questions about Poly's fitness

By Kathryn Hults
Staff Writer

A report that recently revealed school children have high cholesterol levels raises concerns at Cal Poly about its students' levels.

The Cal Poly Pomona study revealed that 37 percent of elementary school children had dangerous levels of cholesterol and that three-fourths of the students were obese due to poor nutrition and insufficient daily exercise.

Although high levels of cholesterol are attributed to diet and lack of physical exercise, it may also be genetic.

On this campus, some students with high cholesterol know that their siblings and parents have high cholesterol, said Dr. James Nash, Cal Poly director of student health services.

Normal cholesterol levels are 200 milligrams per decaliter of blood (decaliter now replaces milliliter), he said. "It is surprising how low some are on this campus."

In order to control cholesterol levels, Nash advised, be leary of large amounts of dairy products, fatty meats, butter and margarine, be physically active, which includes a good aerobic exercise for at least 45 minutes three times per week.

And alcohol tends to elevate cholesterol levels, he said.

"It's hard to control," he said.

Recently, the Health Center purchased a new blood analysis machine for testing cholesterol levels, high density lipoproteins and triglycerides.

"It is the newest version and measures the levels directly," Nash said.

"They've been testing the machine, and they are still working with it."

There are a variety of programs at the Health Center, such as diet analysis and group discussions, that help people with high cholesterol levels, he said.

In late January, Assemblymen Charles M. Calderon, Charles Bader and Tom Hayden announced a campaign to promote health and fitness in school children.

The programs include the development of new statewide standards for health and fitness, education specialists in schools to train teachers and provide direct physical education instruction.

The program would also include cholesterol testing in children grades five through 12 and providing the parents with the results of their children's tests.

Parents of children with cholesterol levels higher than 200 mg/dl would be advised to consult their physician to confirm the test and receive dietary counseling.

"Heart disease begins in childhood," the legislators said. "A 10-year-old child with a cholesterol level of nearly 200 mg/dl is a time bomb that can explode in adulthood."

PAY RAISE

letter to the CSU stating the 4.7 percent increase in pay ($3.3 million) would be implemented June 1, (when other state employees receive raises), but that would be all.

In March, however, the CSU said the faculty would not receive a pay raise unless their union (CFA) would agree to drop all political and legal activities aimed at retrieving the $6.6 million in question.

CFA responded by filing an unfair labor charge against CSU for attempting to force the union to give up its legal rights to the $6.6 million in order to get the raise. CFA, in filing for impasse on negotiations, had a state mediator appointed by the Public Employment Relations Board.

In an April 20 meeting with state mediator William Haney, CSU withdrew its demand that CFA give up its legal right to try to regain the $6.6 million. CFA and CSU then reached a tentative agreement: implement the raise June 1 with the possibility of recovering the $6.6 million in question.

If the dispute is not officially settled by the end of June, the funds will be returned to the state.

"No one wanted to take away the faculty's salary increase," said Jack Samit, CSU officer of the employee relations office.

"There is a difference of opinion," Samit said, remarking that was all he could say since the matter was still being considered before several committees. Other officers at CSU headquarters were either unavailable or had no comment.

WHY DO MORE CALIFORNIA STUDENTS COME TO US FOR STUDENT LOANS?

Because we do more than just talk about great service.

Other banks may claim to have quick service and a complete line of education loan programs. But compare their products and services to ours and you'll see why we're the lender more California students choose.

Service

Do you know where your student loans are? Seriously - many California banks use outside organizations to service their loans. The result - mass confusion. Where do you call with questions? Who do you send your payments to?

Marine Midland's Educational Funding Services uses a state of the art, in-house processing system...eliminating any unnecessary confusion. The result - fast, professional service by a concerned and caring staff.

Loan Alternatives

One sure way to measure a bank's commitment to education finance is to look at the number of different loan programs they offer.

Educational Funding Services offers not only the Stafford, SLS and PLUS loans...but MEDLOANS a loan program for allopathic medical students...as well as an Alternative Loan Program for families with higher incomes.

Debt Management Assistance

You hear a lot of talk about students defaulting on their student loans. But did they get anything from their bank other than overdue notices?

At EFSI, we'll give you the tools and information you need to manage your debt, including:

- Graduated Repayment Options
- Loan Consolidation

So when you're asked which bank you want your student loan from... choose California's best:

Rose fans stand by their man

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose fans find it hard to believe the man whose gritty head-first slides thrilled them for a generation will end up with dirt on his name.

The revelations about Rose's gambling that have filled newspapers for the past six weeks have been largely ignored by local fans, who have a hard time believing the Cincinnati Reds manager would do anything to jeopardize his place in the game.

"Everybody says, 'Where have all the heroes gone?' But all my heroes got shot down, and they're trying to do the same thing to Pete," said Willie DeLuca, who has the bat used for Rose's final hit on display at his restaurant.

Baseball's all-time hits leader is still a hit in his hometown.

No one is pushing to change the street named for him. He still gets lusty cheers whenever he steps on the field. And media commentators have risen to his defense with each new round of reports that his baseball future is in jeopardy.

LOGGING

ting wet. The guy wore his best sweater, had special cleats on, and his hair was combed perfectly. Smokey beat him wearing shorts and a pair of old golf shoes."

"Even though I won the event last year, I started believing the hype about the Idaho birler. It felt great to beat him in front of his home crowd," said McLaughlin, who is also the logging team's coach.

Another Poly standout was axe-thrower Bernard Quinn. He took third in the event in a field of over 150 competitors.

"My hard work and long hours of practice really paid off," said Quinn.

Boccignone took fifth place in the obstacle pole buck and Poly's Josh Chrisman finished sixth in the event, which involves balance on a suspended log and the use of a chainsaw. Boccignone also took fifth place in the dendrology (plant identification) competition.

Flathead Valley Community College from Montana won the overall team competition.

Boccignone said the logging team welcomes new members. "Having more women on the team would increase our chances of winning at the national meets."

Football gives sneak peek

By Mark Ahlemeyer
Staff Writer

After three-and-a-half weeks of practice, the Cal Poly football team got its first taste of action Saturday in the annual Green vs. Gold game. The team was divided in half for the scrimmage.

Both alumni and students showed up to catch an early glimpse of what next year's team might look like. They saw a game where neither passing nor running was dominant.

Both squads did an impressive job. The defensive line was constantly breaking through to put pressure on the quarterback. The gold team's defense was able to keep the green squad from getting into the end zone for the majority of the first half. In spite of the pressure, however, the quarterbacks were able to roll out a majority of the time and get the ball away.

Another factor assisting the defensive lines in getting to the quarterbacks was that the defensive backfields had good coverage. The majority of the passing plays were broken up by alert playing in the secondary.

Good defense did not stop the offenses from giving it their best shot, however. When they couldn't do it by air, they did it by land. The only downer was that the majority of the plays got only short yardage, causing a number of turnovers (in a scrimmage the teams are not allowed to punt, they must go through four downs before the ball gets turned over if no first down is reached). There were a couple of long plays, including one 50-yard run, that lifted the team's spirits.

Coach Lyle Setencich seemed to be pleased with Saturday's game. Setencich said the idea of the scrimmage was to give two complete teams a chance to play each other before more spring competition.

"I really liked the competitiveness from each side. Both teams were very competitive, and I thought they did real well."

The scrimmage also gave Setencich an idea as to what needed to be worked on.

"Offensively, we need to work on protecting the passer. Defensively, we need to work on improving our blitz," he said.

The Mustangs will have three more weeks of practice before their next scrimmage.

WATER

K. KYLE BOWERS/Mustang Daily

Unfortunately for the fish, one student took an extraordinary step to conserve water.

Tim Blair, manager of Mustang Village, said he hasn't received any word from the city regarding specific conservation methods for apartment buildings. But, he said, he and other complexes around the city are cutting back water use on their own.

Blair said his complex is cutting back on landscaping, and is placing water-saving devices on faucets and spigots around Mustang Village.

He said it is too early to notice any results, particularly since his complex is fuller this year than it was at the this time last year, so his water bill is naturally higher.

"We're waiting to see if our cutbacks have resulted in any positive savings," Blair said.

Tina Metzger, water conservation coordinator, said students can help conserve water in their apartment houses by doing the following things:

- Don't wash cars in the apartment parking lots. It results in too much water running down into the gutter. Metzger said students should go to a downtown carwash which recycles water.
- Request managers to put water-saving devices, such as low-flow showerheads, on faucets throughout the apartment.
- Check the faucets and toilets for leaks, even slow ones waste an immense amount of water over long periods of time, Metzger said. Plumbers say toilets are the biggest water-wasters of all household appliances. They may be checked for leaks by placing a drop or two of food color in the toilet tank. If the color seeps into the bowl within five minutes, there is a leak. Also, putting a brick or plastic bottle full of stones in the tank helps reduce the water needed to fill it.

• When washing clothes or dishes, hold off until a full load is compiled, then wash them.

• When allowing water to heat up before a shower, place a bucket to catch the water before it drains. That water could be used to water plants around the house.

engineering."

Cal Poly also designed and entered two concrete canoes in the Arizona competitions. One canoe, "Cow Poly" was white with black spots and "Killer Instinct," the other canoe, was painted as a shark.

Both canoes took first place in the design and presentation categories. Students also competed in canoe races which they practiced for on Laguna Lake in San Luis Obispo. Teri Hoskins, Liz Oman, Pam Kenyon and Kathy Gilcrease won first-place honors for Cal Poly in the four-person women's race.

Although Cal Poly has been participating in this event for about 10 years, this is the first time it has been named the overall winner. San Diego State University took second overall, and Cal State Los Angeles came in third.

"We were ecstatic that we won," Eubanks said. "It really took us by surprise."

Diane Elliott, president of SCE, placed first for her non-technical paper on how to select a consulting engineer and third for her oral presentation of that paper.

"We're really proud. We beat some very important schools," she said, "and that brings recognition to Cal Poly. Maybe they'll look a little more seriously at how good our civil engineering program is here."

Next year's conference will be held in San Luis Obispo.

GRANTS

erim time period set aside for public comment. When that period passed the law went into effect as of March 18, 1989. This presented some problems for Cal Poly's Financial Aid Office.

"The Student Aid Reports started coming out in February,"

Loftus said. "The early SARs didn't have anti-drug requirements. We had to create a form, a drug certification statement for students who didn't get one with their SARs."

"Anybody receiving federal aid would be affected by the law. All federal grant recipients, like Cal Poly, must maintain a drug-free workplace. And individual grant recipients (students) are required to be drug-free during the conduct of grant activity."

Loftus said the federal government has placed watchdog duties on the Financial Aid Office but has not provided funding, manpower or guidelines to be used in administering the program. She added the government has not sent her office a list of what it considers controlled substances. She explained that in certain cases, alcohol and even tobacco can be considered controlled substances.

"We don't have time to do it (watchdog students)," she said. "We will trust the students." Loftus cautioned that if a conviction comes to the attention of the Financial Aid Office it will have to stop further disbursement of that student's Pell Grant.

The Drug-Free Workplace Act affects faculty and administration as well. Loftus explained that Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker will need to sign a statement certifying Cal Poly will be drug-free before the university will receive Pell Grant allocations.

Approximately 3,000 Cal Poly students receive Pell Grants every year and the financial aid office distributes $4.7 million to students. The Pell Grant program is named in honor of Claiborne Pell, Senator from Rhode Island. Pell is the Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities.

Bush, Cheney differ over view of Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush does not share Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's view that Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will fail in his efforts to reform the Soviet Union, a senior White House aide said Sunday.

"I think the president and Secretary (of State James A.) Baker ... are hoping that Gorbachev's movement towards reform and restructuring the Soviet Union does succeed," Sununu said on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press."

"It is an opportunity to establish a relationship, continue the relationship that has begun," he said.

Referring to Cheney's prediction that Gorbachev will fail, Sununu said, "I don't think that's the president's view."

Bush, en route to New York, declined to comment directly on Cheney's comments.

Pressed for views on Gorbachev, Bush said, "We want perestroika to succeed."

Judge closes North case to media, cites recent lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shortly before the jury in the Oliver North trial wound up its eighth day of deliberation Saturday without a verdict Saturday, the judge in the case cut off direct communications with reporters covering the case.

"Hereafter, no information will emanate from my chambers," U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said in a letter to Carl Stern of NBC News who has been acting as a news media liaison with the court since the trial began.

The judge said a lawsuit filed last week by 10 news organizations for public release of a document has made the press corps a party to the case and therefore put reporters in an adversary position.

Since the trial began three months ago, a copy of most documents introduced in court have been made available to the press and news organizations banded together to reproduce them.

During the jury deliberations, reporters have remained in a press room two floors above the court and relied on Stern's contact with Gesell for information about the progress of the deliberations, including notice when a verdict is reached.

For the first time since the jurors retired to consider the case, reporters were not allowed to wait on the second floor where they spend their day.

Gesell refused to release the paper, a stipulation summarizing intelligence intercepts, on grounds that it "is a classified document." The intercepts, as described in court, were a step-by-step tracking of a shipment of Hawk missiles sent by Israel to Iran in 1985 with CIA assistance.

The news organizations petitioned the U.S. Court of Appeals after Gesell's refusal and that court ordered the judge to hold a hearing at which a record can be made.

Not long after Gesell issued his notice, a courthouse official notified the press room that the jury had wound up its work after deliberating three hours and was leaving for another weekend sequestered in a downtown hotel. That raised total deliberation time to 40 and one-half hours.

North is accused of lying to Congress to cover up his role in secretly assisting the Contras and lying to the attorney general about aspects of the diversion of funds to the Contras from the Iran arms sales. He also faces charges that he accepted a $13,800 home security system and converted $4,300 in traveler's checks from a Contra leader to his own use.

Attorney seeks gag order in slain Novato teen case

NOVATO, Calif. (AP) — The defense attorney for a man charged with slaying a 13-year-old Marin County teen-ager said he will seek a gag order to prevent officials from making public statements about the case.

"Mass publicity serves no one in the administration of justice in a small community," said public defender Paulino Duran after a gag order hearing Friday before Marin County Municipal Court Judge Lynn O'Malley Taylor.

Duran represents Scott

Williams, 29, who is charged with the sex slaying of Jennifer Moore. Her partially nude and bound body was found in garbage bags in a cow pasture not far from the Bethel Baptist Church where Williams volunteered as a church deacon and Sunday school teacher.

Duran said he will submit a written request for the gag order next week.

Deputy District Attorney Terrence Boren said his office would resist the order.

Soviets remember disaster

Safety standards no longer top priority at Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — A regional Communist Party chief said in an article published Sunday that safety standards have slipped at the Chernobyl power plant, and he demanded the government provide it with more well-trained specialists.

The article appeared in the Communist Party daily Pravda and came shortly after the third anniversary of an accident that killed at least 31 people.

Grigory I. Revenko, 53, first secretary of the Kiev region, where Chernobyl is located, said workers still are searching for the best way to seal the plant's No. 4 reactor, which exploded and spewed radiation in the worst nuclear power accident.

The reactor was encased in concrete to prevent further radiation leaks. Revenko, a Ukrainian who was recently elected to the new Soviet parliament, did not say why additional measures were needed to seal the reactor.

While that work continues, Revenko said, "Problems with the safe operation of the station more and more are being moved back to second priority."

"The understanding of the acuteness of the problems, including those concerning the safety of the station, has dulled. We consider this unacceptable and demand decisive intervention by" the government, he said.

Other reactors at the plant are working and reportedly have generated more than 40 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity since the accident.

Revenko said Chernobyl workers either have not received the equipment and high-quality spare parts they need or have received them after long delays. He also said scientists and technical specialists throughout the country are poorly coordinating their work on eliminating the accident's consequences.

In addition, he said, the Atomic Energy Ministry is not sending enough workers capable of coping with the special problems at the plant.

The three-column article said it was taking too long to build housing and other buildings for Chernobyl plant workers in a new town, Slavutich, and that an off-limits, contaminated zone around the plant is being poorly managed.

Abortion rights supporters, foes stage six-hour protest at clinic

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Abortion rights advocates hustled young women through a blockade into a medical clinic amid shouts of "Murderer!" as up to 1,000 foes and supporters of abortion faced off for hours Saturday.

The demonstration by Operation Rescue and another that drew several hundred in Sacramento were staged as the U.S. Supreme Court considers a case that could affect its landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortion nationwide.

The crowd around the Inglewood offices of Family Planning Associates Medical Group and West Coast Women's Medical Group numbered 700 to 1,000, said police Officer Carl Smith.

The six-hour protest ended with no arrests.

The pro-choice group had the inside position, guarding doors to keep the clinic open and providing escorts to help patients through blockades.

Kathy Spillar, national coordinator of the group Feminist Majority, said about 20 patients as well as clinic staff were escorted inside.

One young woman was muscled through as abortion foes yelled "Murderer!" and counter demonstrators yelled "Let her through!" Burly guards slammed the doors shut behind her. It was not known if she was an abortion patient.

Escorts failed on the first attempt to push another woman through a blockade and retreated as she cried. A second try succeeded.

"She was saying, 'I wish they only knew why I had to do this,'" said an escort, Tomydan Jordan. He said she mentioned she had been in an accident and could not carry the baby to term.

In Sacramento, several hundred protesters on both sides gathered at Pregnancy Consultation Center, but it was closed. Operation Rescue members came from San Francisco and Sacramento, said spokeswoman Kelly Connelly.

"We just know that women are being lied to about abortions. Women are being hurt," she said.

The abortion demonstrators were confronted by the Bay Area Coalition Against Operation Rescue. Spokeswoman Laura Weide said the group kept two other Sacramento clinics open and prevented Operation Rescue from demonstrating in the San Francisco area.

Earlier this year, hundreds of demonstrators were arrested during Easter Week protests by Operation Rescue in Southern California.

In Inglewood, feminist attorney Gloria Allred used a bullhorn to read a federal court order issued before the Easter Week demonstrations prohibiting protesters within 15 feet of clinics.

"This is a battle for the nation's conscience, and it's no time to sit on the sidelines," said state Controller Gray Davis, who also read the order. "I'm here because women fought long and hard for the right to control their bodies, and they should not be asked to surrender their rights."

"Babies are scheduled to die here today," said Operation Rescue member Sue Finn. "That's why we're here."

"The press is biased on the side of abortion," said a woman who would not identify herself. She wore an Operation Rescue Los Angeles shirt.
